

In the review The fundamental importance of basic science: examples of high-impact discoveries from an international Chemistry Network, with DOI number: <https://dx.doi.org/10.21577/0100-4042.20170584>, published in the journal Quim. Nova, Vol. 43, No. 8, 1176-1189, 2020.

Page 1177, last paragraph in the right column

Where it reads:

It was founded as a learned society in 1660, and from 1963 onwards became known as ‘The Royal Society of London for Improving Natural Knowledge’

Should be read:

It was founded as a learned society in 1660, and from 1663 onwards became known as ‘The Royal Society of London for Improving Natural Knowledge’